

Ever since I signed up for the NJ "Do Not Call" List, the numerous annoying phone calls I constantly get and the messages left on my answering machine have dwindled down to almost nothing. For many years, these calls have been both an invasion of privacy and downright harrassment. I would hope the FCC makes the correct decision not to overturn New Jersey's "Do Not Call" law. If they overturn it, the FCC could expose themselves to class-action lawsuits, and possibly protests at their Washington office. Although I don't fall into either of the groups that would do this, there are many overzealous individuals in New Jersey, and across the country, who feel very passionate about this issue.